New Workers/Hires Orientation - Cost of Time

The major cost of training is not the cost of actual training program, but money paid to workers for time spent during taking training. It is regular practice for workers to spent half or full first day on the job in the classroom taking orientation and additional required safety training.

Change in Way Orientation is Delivered

More and more companies require workers to go on-line and take orientation at home before arriving on the site. It is no different than requirement from workers to have specific training and certifications for employment. It saves time and money. Then, if required, short site specific training can be delivered upon arrival. Shortening time of orientation training from e.g. 6 hours to 1 can make the difference of thousand of dollars a year.

How OSCTS can Assist Your Company

In New Workers Orientation category on our web site, we have good range of new workers orientation programs which can be utilized by your company for workers to take at home before arriving on the site. It can be recognized as one of the employment requirements. Than short site-specific training can be provided upon workers arrival. Again huge saving of time and money.

Parking Your Orientation on OSCTS Web Site

For low monthly and installation fee, OSCTS can add your orientation to

"New Workers Orientation" category at <https://www.oscts.ca/shop/> or it can be placed at "New Workers Orientation - Company Specific" category. Then you just need to supply link to workers to go to the site and take training before arriving. Your program can be open to everybody, or access password protected, see example at <https://www.oscts.ca/product-category/new-workers-orientation-company-specific/>

Orientations Delivered in Multiple Locations

Some companies work in multiple locations, and there are logistical difficulties delivering Power Point presentations, or updates (when changes are implemented) to personnel delivering training in timely manner. Parking your Power Point and other training materials on OSCTS web site will allow for instant access to most updated presentation, or presentations configured to the location requirements.
