Training for Health and Safety Committee Memebers

Bill 30 came to live more than two month ago and is reality. Health & Safety Committees are being put in place, but very often there is no real knowledge of how to organize and run them. Committee members may lack knowledge of what their duties, responsibilities, and rights are, and haw to get involved.

OSCTS brings you general, province, and federal government specific training programs for members of joint health and safety committees (check with your provincial requirements, some provinces require in-class training only to become certified joint health and safety committee member). Also you may check if there is requirement of health and safety committee member to be certified or no.

On line training for health and safety committee members can be found at <https://www.oscts.ca/product-category/jhs-committees/>
